

On-the-Job Training

If you want to reduce the time it takes to hire, the single best thing you can do is build a talent pipeline.

The Florida Department of Education, Division of Vocational Rehabilitation (VR) helps eligible individuals with disabilities find, get and keep a job.

What Is On-the-Job Training?

On-the-job training, also known as OJT, is a hands-on method of teaching the skills, knowledge and competencies needed for an individual to successfully perform a specific job within the workplace. Trainees learn in a real, or simulated, working environment where they practice job duties with guidance from a job coach, supervisor, colleague or other experienced employee.

OJT can shorten an employee's time-to-proficiency. They also enable OJT Employer Vendors to attract qualified talent and quickly identify top candidates. There is no obligation to hire participants when the OJT is complete and VR can reimburse up to 110 percent of the participant's wages. Additionally, VR may be able to support the customer on the job with tools, equipment, uniforms and accommodations.

Who Arranges On-the-Job Training?

Our agency will arrange the OJT, pre-screen appropriate candidates, and provide any follow-up services as needed. After training begins, VR will provide continued support for you and the trainee.

Advantages for Businesses that Participate in OJT

Immediate Productivity

The OJT process helps participants to learn job duties quickly and gives them hands-on experience in your work environment. It uses your existing workplace tools, machines, documents, equipment and knowledge to teach a trainee how to effectively do a job. OJTs also provide an opportunity to determine if the trainee would be a good fit for your company, after the training is complete, at no cost to you.

Cost Efficiency

OJTs take place as a part of the regular work day. Participants are trained by existing employees performing their jobs which means business operations are not impacted and budgeting for expenses related to classroom training is not necessary.

Team Building

Participants in OJT become a contributor to your team early on. Learning from peers makes it easy for trainees and current employees to connect. Moreover, trainees become familiar with the workplace practices and culture of your company.
